

DEALING IN FUTURES.

Senator White Makes a Lengthy Speech Against the Anti-Option Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—White, speaking on the anti-option bill in the senate today, called attention to the anomaly that "if the bill had not specially excepted the government of the United States, the government would have been amenable to the penalties of the bill. Were not all bills for supplies tendered to the government made by parties who did not at the time the contracts were made own supplies?" he asked. Referring to the fact that retail dealers were excepted, White said there were so many exceptions in the bill it might be called an exception bill, so he beat on. He went on to declare that the bill was pernicious and vicious. It would strike a blow at the commerce of the country was the consensus of opinion on part of the commercial bodies. The country was against the measure and in this line he read protest from various commercial associations.

Speaking of "futures," White said before that system came into existence the cotton business was confined to men of large capital, whereas now, under the "futures delivery" system, all men were on a footing of equality, and men with small capital were the equals with those of large capital. He had telegrams read from many cotton factors in New Orleans. As to the effect of the future system on wheat, White quoted Pillsbury's testimony before the house committee on agriculture, to the effect that for the last 10 years millions more were paid for wheat than they got for flour made from it. White would like to know what became of the argument that under the "future" system farmers did not receive for their wheat as much as they otherwise would have done.

Speaking on cotton again, he said he had seen lately a letter from a German merchant in Hamburg, stating that he noticed there was an intention to strike down the exchange business here, and he hoped it would come over there. White spoke nearly three hours and the bill went over without action.

The house bill to enforce reciprocal commercial arrangements between the United States and Canada was passed without division. Adjourned.

Lord Hershfield will be lord chancellor, Lord Roseberry foreign secretary, and Lord Bouverie postmaster general. The queen will be asked to confer a dukedom on Lord Spencer and a baronetcy on Arnold Morley. The first measure introduced will be the "one man one vote" bill, and the next the home rule bill. The Times asserts that the government will resign immediately after a vote of "no confidence."

Promise of a Necktie Party.

She is in a critical condition. Groups of men are hunting for the negro and if he is found he will surely be lynched.

PRAYING LIKE GOOD FELLOWS

Two Condemned Murderers Who Are Afraid to Die.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—The two convicted and condemned colored Camden murderers, Thomas Moulton and Alfred Boyer, now awaiting execution in Camden jail, are quietly making the most of their time before their last moments on earth are tolled. They spend their time in singing and praying for forgiveness. Crowds gather on the Sixth street front every afternoon and evening to listen to the appeal for mercy from the condemned. The men have a daily routine to go through, and as regular as clock work they are called every morning at 7 o'clock and given a bath. At 8 o'clock they receive their breakfast, and an hour afterwards their spiritual advisers are received.

Moulton receives instruction and advice regarding his preparations for the future world from Rev. Father Kelly, a well known Roman Catholic clergyman of Camden, and Boyer receives his from the Rev. Mr. Drake, a Protestant Episcopal clergyman. They remain closeted with the prisoners for nearly two hours, praying with them and reading such works as are considered beneficial to their moral conception and the surroundings of their present condition as well as the consequences of their crime.

During the remainder of the day the prisoners pray earnestly for forgiveness. At 4 o'clock they receive their dinner, ordered from a nearby restaurant, and at 9 o'clock in the evening they retire. Both men are in excellent condition. They eat regularly and heartily and generally appear to be cheerful. Moulton realizes the enormity of his crime and says that he is willing and ready to pay the penalty on the gallows. He has no hope of a new trial and asks for no clemency. He believes that he ought to be hanged and professes to wish that "it was all over." He prays about three times a day for forgiveness and sings at intervals during the morning and afternoon. "Nearer My God to Thee" is a favorite hymn of his, and he sings it every day. He professes to have received divine assurance that he has been forgiven and says that he believes he will meet his victim in heaven.

Boyer is weakening. He hopes for a new trial and prays earnestly that his neck may be saved. He admits his guilt, but insists that great provocations drove him to cut his victims' throats. His shouts for mercy can at times be heard for squares away from the jail. He has not been assured of Divine pardon, and all day long, excepting the time in which he is singing, he is on his knees, with his head bowed low and his arms clasped around the Bible. His favorite hymn is "Rock of Ages." He claims that he has been assured that everything will be done to secure him from death.

MIDNIGHT YELLS.

A Fanny Difficulty in Room 3 of the Lewisham Block.

BUTTE, July 22.—This morning between 12 and 1 o'clock the neighborhood of Granite and Montana streets was aroused by the piercing shrieks of a woman that issued from a room in the third story of the Lewisham block. Several persons rooming in the building got up and began to look for a policeman. A man coming out of the court house, a block away, also heard the screams and ran down to Main street where he found Officer Higgins to whom he said a woman was being murdered. The officer went to the building and was told by some of the roomers that the screams had come out of No. 3. The officer knocked for admission but the occupants of the room refused to open the door and as the screams had ceased he was afraid to open the door and went in search of Chief Gray who returned with him and who demanded that the door be opened. After delay the door was finally opened by A. L. Dowler, who explained the screams by saying that he and his wife, who was lying in bed, had had "a little family difficulty." As the woman showed no signs of having been seriously injured Dowler was not arrested. Those who heard the screams thought that a murder had been committed, and were surprised when they learned that the woman was alive.

A Dishonest Consul.

COPENHAGEN, July 22.—The arrest of Henry B. Ryder, American consul here, announced last night, was due to a complaint made against him by members of a family which inherited 1,000 kroner from a relative who died in the United States and asserts that they only received 600 from Ryder. He is further suspected of embezzling sums of money forwarded by the United States government to Danish police officers for certain services they had rendered.

In Morocco.

MADRID, July 22.—El Liberal publishes appalling accounts of the situation in Morocco. Imperial troops, according to these accounts, are unable to cope with the rebels, who are plundering and maltreating indiscriminately. The Spanish press is pleased at the failure of the English mission.

Their Bodies Found.
